RAYMOND AS THE "WIGWAM BOY." A very rich satire upon current political characters, has just been published in New York, under the title of "Wigwam Junetion." It is in the style of Dickens' "Mugby Junction," Raymond of the New York Times, comes in for it in this wise:

I am the Boy of the Wigwam. I am the little Boy of the Wigwam. My parents call me Hanky Raymond, but I always goes with the Public by the name of the oy. I blacks and licks the boots, and ows the noses and wipes away the tears of the wisitors. I am a contortionist, I am ; amuses the fellers what comes here by urning of myself inside out and outside in I kin stand on my head and my heals at one and the same time. The Davenport Brothers isn't a patch to me. Vy, only the other day I performed a trick which it has paralyzed everybody with wonder. I took a tureen of Treasury soup and held it out at arm's length, and at the same time reseatedly turned myself inside and outside of my roundabout, without spillin a drop of the soup or damagin of myself a bit, or Two Saw Mills, Coart are, with double eight making the alightest wrinkle in my coat. (Between us, I had that ere garment made has never been run. All in good condition. very loose, and split under the sleeves, so as to move easy.) I am a very funny feeler, ometimes, I am. The other day I made a tableau of myself. You'd oughter a seen me. It was a very amusin thing. I was a standin in front of Wigwam a countin of the pennies which I had made by sellin news--for there is one paper which I gits r nothing and of which I sells several copies daily for fellers who write for it and Veteran greenies-as I was a saying, I was countin of the pennies which I had made, and was a standin with my tage to the Wigwam door so that no other Boy should catch a sight of me and play grab, when who should I see a coming out of the Wigwam but the great Weeper. "Boy," says he, in a voice of thunder mixed with hitters and sugar, "look at them boots! I thought you cleaned them boots off this oornin?" "Yes sir," says I, a rollin my ongue, for I knowed what war a comia, 'Yessir, so I did." "Vell," sayshe, "Now you est git down and clean them yer boots agin So I just drops down and war a benden over, when I heard a step I knowed very wel-a step behind me-and then I felt kick I knowed still better. Old Thad, ver see, always wears square-tord boots, and he dants'em firm, and for an old man he de ck powerful strong. Now the Umble adividocal he pretends not to see old Thad. He smiles blandly at noothink all the while, only lookin' down occasionally and pintin out with his toe the pecooliar pots that needed extry touches. I didn't turn round; and so old Thad he sent in a couple of busters that fairly loosened every hair in my body. "Boy," he yowied, "look at my boots?" Now, exercisin one of the numerous double fackilties that I somesses, I cast a look backwards at the ogans that was at this time a playin' like the walkin' beam of a ferry-boat. In an in stan' I perceived that sumthin mas be did. on will please to reinember that old Thad, he stood square behind me, a plungin away like mad. Without stoppin e final polishin on the kips of the 'Umble Individ, I simeoltaneously began opera-tions on the gunboats of Thad-cleanin both pairs of boots at one and the same time! What made this feat more remarkable is the fact that old Thad never stopped his kickin' for a minit! Gentlemen, I thank you for the nickels, and in return I will perform several of my most amousin tricks. You see me hold myself out at arm's length by the slack of the tronsers. That's nothin. It's much easier to do that than sell the Times. You me me lookir four ways at onst. That's one of my most extraordinary tricks. Will any genleman be good enough to kick me I like to be kicked. It hurts, but I like it You perceive, genl'men, that kickin doesn't affect me. I makes no complaints. Even when I am kicked the worstest, I kin smile and smile, and be a Little Villain. This way, genl'men, to the pudlock and secretarial department. Here's where I writes my letters and commoonicashuns. I'm a wery literary boy. I've wrote a good deal. I've wrote a good many letterswish I could get some of 'em back. Tain't fair for one feller to keep another feller's letters, and make she other feller lick his boots for fear of havin' them dockyments exposed-tain't fair, is it? leal'mes, I make no complaints. I like to be kicked. But that genl'man who just now stabbed me with sich uncomon force hada' ought to put bradawls in the pints of Genl'men' I'm very fond of the theavtre I think I'd be a good actor myself. Fact a, I'm reely heavy in private theatricals. You oughter see me as Repentant Hanks in the play of "The Apostate, or the Cum of are not signs of dissatisfackshun? If I'd a known that I would a disgusted you, genl'men, I wouldn't a done it.
